The current global pandemic and economic crisis has a devastating impact on the most sectors of global economy. However, physical distancing has led to a rapid uptake of digital solutions for work, studies and social interactions. We will discuss new opportunities emerging for digital entrepreneurs taking advantage our speakers' vast knowledge and immense practical experience. The webinar will tackle also potential risks from rapid digitalization of economic, political and social life resulting from the creative gales of destruction. As large global digital platforms are flush with cash, digital markets could be further concentrated and platform-dependent entrepreneurship can increase. We will explore the ways for securing competition and entrepreneurial vibrancy in global digital ecosystems.
